Chicago Manual of Style: A Basic Guide

Many disciplines in the humanities (other than literature, which uses MLA--Modern Language Association--style) follow the citation styles described in the The Chicago Manual of Style. The Chicago Manual is primarily concerned with the preparation and editing of papers and books for publication, so it has no guidelines on some elements of student papers, such as whether to include a title page, how to indicate the names of the student, professor, course name or number, and date. Follow the professor's preferences on these matters and whether to include notes on separate pages following the text of the paper or at the bottom of each page.

Note: If your project is a lengthy one, with many sources, you may wish to use RefWorks. You will need to create an account and take the online tutorial. When you get to the point of choosing an "output style," select Chicago 15th Edition (Notes & Bibliography). You will still need to construct your own notes and check the format and alphabetization of the entries!
